syn ENVIOUS, JEALOUS shared meaning element: begrudging another possession of something. In spite of their shared element of meaning, these words are not close synonyms and can rarely be interchanged without loss of precision or alteration of emphasis. ENVIOUS stresses a coveting of something (as riches or attainments) which belongs to another or of something (as success or good luck) which has come to another; it may imply an urgent, even malicious desire to see him dispossessed (<some envious hand has sprinkled ashes just to spoil our slide>—Eugene Field) or no more than a mild innocuous coveting (<we are all envious of your new coat>) JEALOUS is likely to stress intolerance of a rival for possession of what one regards as peculiarly one's own possession or due, or it may imply intensely zealous efforts to keep what one treasures. The term can be used without derogation (<thou shalt have no other gods before me . . . for I the Lord thy God am a jealous God>—Exod 20:3–5(AV)) but more often it carries a strong implication of distrust, suspicion, enviousness, or sometimes anger (<stabbed by a jealous lover>) ()

syn EXCUSE, CONDONE, PARDON, FORGIVE shared meaning element: to exact neither punishment nor redress for (an offense) or from (an offender). Both excuse and condone imply a passing over without censure or meet punishment. One PARDONS when one remits a penalty rightfully due for an admitted or established offense (pardon a criminal) (pardon the noisy enthusiasm of a child) One FORGIVES when one gives up all claim to requital and to resentment or vengeful feelings (to err is human, to forgive divine — Alexander Pope) ant punish
